

Doctoral Symposium on Research on Online Databases in History (RODBH 2019)

April 4th-5th 2019, Leipzig

Call for Papers

The doctoral symposium deals with research on online databases in the academic field of history. It gathers Ph.D. students from the Humanities, Computer Science and Digital Humanities who are using Semantic Web technologies and are concerned with Ontology building in their projects. The Doctoral Symposium will provide students with:

- a scientific environment within an interdisciplinary and international forum to present their research;
- a discussion platform concerning research and methodologies; and further issues;
- an overview of the breadth and depth of Data for History;
- feedback and suggestions from peers and experienced faculty;
- the opportunity to obtain insight into directions for research on online databases in History taken by other doctoral candidates; and
- an opportunity to network with peers and future colleagues.

The Doctoral Symposium is hosted by Leipzig University of Applied Science, Faculty of Informatics and Media (HTWK) as part of the Research project Early Modern Professorial Career Patterns - Methodological research on online databases of academic history¹, in cooperation with the European Consortium on Data for History². A general meeting of the DfH Consortium is part of the workshop and includes the application of the OntoMe - Ontology Management Environment³, a platform to design vocabularies using ontologies contributed by the participating Ph.D. students.

Submission, Eligibility and Review Criteria

The paper submission to the doctoral symposium is open only to Doctoral or Ph.D. Students. Accepted paper at the Doctoral Symposium must be presented by the student, for which accommodation and participation are funded by the German Science Foundation (DFG). Travel expenses are reimbursed pro rata.

Submissions will be judged mainly on relevance, originality, technical quality and clarity. Papers must be written in English and be between 4 and 8 pages in length, following the LNI (Lecture Notes in Informatics) templates in Word or LaTeX provided by Gesellschaft für Informatik e.V.⁴. It is planned to publish the peer-reviewed papers.

The contributions may include a vocabulary of the applied research vocabulary under Creative Commons Attribution 4.0 International Public License ("Public License"), if available in RDF format. All papers should be submitted using EasyChair⁵.
